WHO WAS SHE?-

Mary Shelley was an English writer, author of the novel "Frankenstein." She was born in Somers Town, London, on August 30, 1797. She lost her mother shortly after her birth. Her father was left to care for Mary. In 1801, her father married Mary Jane Clairmont but Mary never got along with her stepmother. Despite not receiving a formal education, she was always reading books from her father's library.

SOME FAMOUS BOOKS-

- Frankenstein (1816)
- Matilda (1819)
- The Last Man (1926)
- The Mortal Immortal (1833)
- Valperga(1823)

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION

Raised by her father, Mary grew up in an intellectual environment, surrounded by books, despite receiving no formal education. Her relationship with her stepmother, Mary Jane Clairmont, was difficult, but Mary developed a passion for reading and writing from an early age.

RELATIONSHIP WITH PERCY SHELLEY

At 17, she fell in love with the poet Percy Bysshe Shelley. Even though he was married, the two eloped together in 1814, accompanied by Mary's half-sister. They lived a nomadic life across Europe, marked by personal loss and challenges.

TRAGEDIES AND DEATH

Mary's life was marked by suffering, with the deaths of two more children. Her son, Percy, was the only one to survive to adulthood. In 1822, her husband drowned while sailing in Italy.

Widowed at 24, Mary worked hard to support herself and her son. She wrote several other novels and science fiction stories. She also published her husband's poetry.

Mary Shelley died on February 1, 1851, of a brain tumor.
